The Illumination Project

Become a Student Educator with the Illumination Project!

The Illumination Project is Portland Community College’s innovative nationally lauded student leadership and campus equity program that addresses issues of social justice—racism, sexism, religious oppression, domestic and sexual violence, homophobia, classism etc.—through interactive theater.

The Illumination Project has a dual purpose. First the project provides participating students with an opportunity to learn about social justice issues and interactive theater and develop skills as educators, actors, activists, and leaders. These students then educate other students, staff and faculty audiences to confront stereotypes, teach conflict negotiation and promote racial, gender, and economic equity.

Program Commitment

To be eligible you need to commit to a THREE TERM process that includes:
